1. EDITORIAL

Welcome to an extra edition of Footlights. I've been asked to send this out to let you know of some upcoming events.

I would have mentioned these in the regular issue but I didn't know about 'em. I can't mention them next month because by then, they'll have already happened.

In other news Barton Theatre Company now has a Flickr page. Check out some great photos at <http://www.flickr.com/photos/bartontheatre/>.

Some of you couldn't view the Monton Festival photos (see July's Footlights) on the Facebook. So I've emailed these to Terry and have asked him to post them on the Flickr site and/or Barton website

See you in August with our regular edition stuffed full of the usual ~~nonsense~~ features

2. UPCOMING EVENTS

Most of you know Joan Breen as Bev Greenhalgh's partner-in-crime in props and costume. But did you also realise that she's a top writer? She wrote last year's magnificent pantomime, Rapunzel and is back again this year with Pinocchio. But as well as panto, Joan has also written a 'proper play'.

It's called Goodbye Barney Blue and is pencilled in as one of our productions for 2013. Just to give everyone an idea of what it's about – and because it's nice to get together – we're holding a read through on Monday 23 July at 8:00pm at St Mikes.

The following week, Brian Cogswell will be running a workshop on the thing he does best. How to walk in heels! Actually no, it's all about Hair and Make-up. Have you ever wondered how to apply foundation? Do you know the correct way to put on a wig? Did you know there was a correct way to put on a wig? In what promises to be an informative evening, Brian will reveal all! (About hair and make up – and possibly heels.) That's on Monday 30 July at 8:0pm at St Mikes.
